<http://activities.cleanuptheworld.org/?4144/1354>

Participating in the Clean Up the World campaign for the first time, NGO Eko Put- Eco Way combined their clean up activities with an awareness raising event to highlight to their community, the problem of waste in the environment. From September to December, volunteers from the organisation were joined by members of the Eco Union of Bijeljina, to carry out a series of clean ups of the Drina River. An assortment of waste, including plastic bottles were removed from the river. Photos of the waste collected were then used by the organisation as part of a street performance to raise awareness about the need to keep nature clean.

Participating in Clean Up the World for the first time in 2009, Mali Zeleni & Bisevo organised a clean up on the Croatian island, Bisevo. Over the course of 15 days, a group of 12 volunteers worked in hot 40 degree Celsius temperatures, to collect approximately 300 bags of waste and other large items - including a stove and a refrigerator, from Porat and Mezoporat beaches and surroundings. Thanks to the volunteer's efforts, the beaches and surrounding areas were not only left cleaner and had greater protection from fire hazards, but the local community and tourists on the island were also made aware of the need to respect public spaces by keeping them clean for all to enjoy.

From September 19-20, Cap Marseille organised their 10th annual clean up event of the Old Port of Marseille, in support of Clean Up the World Weekend. Titled "Rencontres des Passionnés de Mer", the event was organised to bring the community of Marseille together to increase awareness of the need to protect the environment, in particular the harbour and to celebrate the maritime heritage of Marseille. Volunteers took to the water on traditional boats and cleaned the port area. In addition to the clean up, an exhibit was held at the l'Ecole Méditerranéenne de l'Environnement (the Mediterranean School of the Environment), to inform the community of problems associated with waste in marine environments.

Local support provided by: Marseille Provence Métropole Ville de Marseille, Conseil Général, Conseil Régional Associations des Canotiers Boud de mer Office de la Mer et ATM.

2009 - Participant Activities in Europe

In 2009, volunteers organised by NGO the Environmental Safety Group organised a cleanup of Gibraltar. Mobilising 700 volunteers, the Environmental Safety Group was able to remove 100 tonnes of waste from 20 sites both on land and in marine environments. Crews were able to reach difficult sites using both abseiling and diving. Being held for the fifth year in a row, the cleanup activities focused around Gibraltar's most famous landmark, the Gibraltar Rock.

In addition to the clean up day, both a parade and an exhibition was held. The exhibition in particular was well received, as it featured eye catching art made from waste and a large screen that showed documentaries about previous years' cleanups. Finally, school children received awards for their environmental posters.

2009 - Participant Activities in Europe

In their sixteenth year participating in Clean Up the World, Fundacja Nasza Ziemia (Our Earth Foundation) carried out the "Let's Help the Earth - Every Day" campaign in 2009. With a focus on promoting simple ways to protect the environment and live more sustainably, the campaign focused on a range of events and educational campaigns. Approximately 150,000 volunteers worked together to remove over 340 tonnes of waste across the nation. While waste was removed from a range of sites, the clean up included the complete liquidation of 400 wild waste dumps. In addition to the waste removal events, education campaigns were held on the topic of reducing water and electricity use along with the benefits of recycling. To promote the campaign, 60,000 posters were printed and distributed to 1,000 groups including local governments, schools and social organisations throughout Poland. This year's campaign, resulted in the removal of waste from Poland's streets, local parks, national parks, forests, school areas, beaches, river banks, lakes, and the Baltic Sea (with the help of divers).

Local support provided by: National Fund for Environmental Protection and Water Management, Vattenfall, British Council, Clear Channel Poland, Coca-Cola HBC, Plastics Europe Foundation, KOBA, PTK Centertel, Polish Chamber of Commerce, Rekopol, DB Schenker.
